THE ART-JOURNAL. (Commencing with the 1st of January, 1858, a New Volume with the New Year price 1s. 6d. monthly.)

The Editors of the Art-Journal, grateful for the extensive support they have received, during a year of extraordinary exertion, energy, and prosperity, in all that appertains to the Art, is established to assist and promote, are endeavoring to introduce into that Publication all the improvements of which it is capable.

With the New Series of the Art-Journal—beginning in 1858—was commenced the "Verger Gallery," a collection of fine engravings of the works by British artists, presented to the nation by the late Robert Vernon, Esq. Of these each Monthly Part contains two, together with a steel engraving of sculpture; and in January, 1858, will commence engravings from the famous gallery at Chesham, by special permission of his Grace the Duke of Devonshire. Each Part also contains, generally, about Fifty Engravings on Wood; and the letter-press is supplied by experienced and accomplished writers on the Fine Arts and the Industrial Arts. The Art-Journal has been accepted as "a valuable acquisition to the student of the artist, to the library of the amateur, to the desk of the student, to the workshop of the manufacturer, and to the drawing-table of the lover of Art and the admirer of beautiful engraving."

Since its establishment as the "Art-Journal," in 1850, under the editorship by which it is now conducted, its circulation has been gradually raised from 300 to 25,000.

It will be evident to those who review the progress of Art during the last seven or eight years, that the public, from whom such patronage was to be obtained, had to be created; and it may be assumed that the ART-JOURNAL has been an important instrument in advancing those Arts, which were, until within a comparatively recent period, greatly neglected and entirely unrepresented in England.

The ART-JOURNAL now circulates extensively through the best channels in Europe, the United States, and the British colonies; its large circulation, and consequent power, supply the best stimulus for exertion; and it may be justly demanded of its conductors that their future resources will be wisely and liberally made available to manifest their sense of the support they have received, and to secure its continuance.
